Dear Subscribers:

Would you like to have more articles like those now appearing in the English Journal? We receive more excellent papers than our space will permit us to print. Evidently the English Journal must be enlarged. It can be, if you will help.

There are thousands who would subscribe for the Journal if they were acquainted with it. All our subscription campaigns yield good returns but we find it hard to get names of the teachers of English. If you will send us the names of possible subscribers we will send them current-issue sample copies and prospectuses of the magazine for 1922. With the increased income we can and will add at least sixteen pages to alternate issues during 1922.

Sincerely yours,

STUDIES IN READING

By JAMES F. HOSIC

Associate Professor of Education, Teachers College Columbia University

A concrete account of an investigation to determine the value of methods, questions, and devices in literary reading books.

This is one of the few scientific studies in the field of method. The conclusions reached have an important bearing on the making of textbooks and on the direction of classroom activities.

Full stenographic reports of twenty-five lessons in grades four to eight are included.

Price $2.50 in cloth, $2.00 in paper

and

HARRY GILBERT PAUL

Professor of the Teaching of English, University of Illinois

A distinguished English teacher writes:

"I like 'Story, Essay, and Verse,' furthermore, because it emphasizes contemporary writing and writers, and thus shows the reader that literature is very much alive,—that it did not die with Tennyson or Browning, but is all around us. This is a lesson that, as a boy, I entirely failed to learn."

WILL CONDUCT ITS THIRD

SCHOOL OF ENGLISH

July 3–August 18, 1922

The Bread Loaf School is composed of groups of students working on the studio plan in dramatic production, story, verse, and play writing, literary appreciation, principles of teaching, and related problems. Close co-ordination is maintained between different branches of the School. The Battell Forest, the Long Trail, and Vermont's most beautiful scenery furnish a unique setting for the School. The presence of distinguished guests and close association between instructors and students afford ideal conditions for study and creative work.

ORAL ENGLISH

A satisfactory correlation of Oral English with certain of the regular composition and literature courses of the secondary schools has been effected by some of the leading high schools of the United States through the use of the inexpensive and compact little text, Elements of Debating, by Leverett S. Lyon, of the University of Chicago.

The virtues claimed for this book by those who have put it into the hands of their pupils are these:

It offers an effective way of promoting Oral English.

Instead of interfering with the regular composition and literature work, it serves as a stimulating supplement.

The book teaches the subject, thus establishing the confidence of the teacher untrained in public speaking and enabling such a teacher to do highly effective work.

The book is written by a man familiar with the high-school problem, and is thoroughly within the vocabulary and experience of high-school pupils.

SELECTED STORIES FROM KIPLING

Here at last is a book of Kipling stories selected with a view to class-room use. The demand for this book through the years has been insistent, and we were fortunate enough to get Professor WILLIAM LYON PHELPS of Yale to edit the volume. Let us send you a copy of the Table of Contents for you to see whether the book cannot be used in some of your short-story or contemporary literature courses.

HAWTHORNE POE IRVING

The series of books called "Little Masterpieces" contained these three books. They are edited by Professor BLISS PERRY of Harvard, and we have just reprinted them for educational use. At 50 cents a copy they are most attractively priced. A specimen copy and the contents of all three volumes will be sent to any teacher who can definitely consider them for class use.
